Portland, Oct. 29.—Hop buyers and potato shippers complain of unreasonable delay in obtaining freight cars with which to ship products of the Willamette valley. Orders for cars have been registered with the railroad company here for 12 days and even 15 days and still no cars are available.

"Everybody wants cars at once," according to the railroad officials, "and there are not cars enough to move the crops of the Northwest unless considerable time is allowed."

In the meantime business in hops and potatoes is seriously interfered with, and many orders for these products have been canceled because cars cannot be obtained.

Eastern brewers want Oregon hops and California consumers are willing to pay fair prices for Oregon potatoes, but must look elsewhere for supplies, because their orders have been delayed beyond reason in the region tributary to Portland.

Choice apples become scarcer from the Hood river valley and Southern Oregon are holding the high for the Portland trade.

Head over apple-raisers demand $3 a box for Spitzenbergs," said Bell & Co., of Astoria, "and they want $2.75 a box for Yellow Newtowns. We cannot get any more prices for apples here, so must resign ourselves with what we can buy in Western Oregon and Washington. Oregon apples are not shipped to Portland, either, on account of the high prices, and the crop which is left here goes East."
